Creating unique, functional and timeless pieces of art, made the last for generations, using only the best in terms of sustainable feedstock, is the company's legacy.

Boulle uses wood as its mais source of raw material and has its own team that searches the most remote regions of Latin America, trees that fell naturally, woods that were submerged in rivers and dams, especially old pieces and FSC certified woods, in which the team can give a new life and a new utility with the creative touch of the Boulle's designers.

“Our passion is to transform natural reclaimed wood into unique pieces of art. We believe in nature’s design as the foundation to functional contemporary furniture and objects”

Boulle has been creating finely crafted furniture since 2000. It is now one of the leading producers of high end wood furniture in Brazil, trusted for its mastery of woodworking, application of craftsmanship and high-end technology, its ability to tailor-make furniture to a client's specific requirements, and its sustainability credentials.

High end wood furniture is literally a tough market and the emphasis is on durability in all senses. Boule's designers, in the best modernist tradition, have to match lasting elegance and adaptability with super-functionality.

Boullé furniture can now find itself in unexpected places doing unexpected things. And for designer and manufacturer, this is a time of challenge and opportunity. The call is for furniture that doesn't just work in a variety of settings but can also define spaces in different ways at different times. The right design team then is essential
